

Core-4 Prep Guide

Fast, effective prep templates designed to simplify coaching and maximize athlete performance.

Created by Garrett Phelps, founder of Strength Through Systems

This template is for new or experienced strength coaches who want to stop guessing and start designing prep with purpose. It's built for coaches who value system clarity and prefer using the Core-4 Movement prep—not random stretches—to guide readiness.

This template gives you a structured, plug-and-play system to build daily prep sessions that align with your training goals. Instead of randomly picking stretches or activation drills, this tool helps you:

- Categorize prep by the Core-4 Exercises
- Match exercises to the specific subset of each Core-4 Movement
- Maintain balanced readiness across all major movement patterns
- Track what areas you're addressing—and what you may be missing

Instructions

Step 1: Start with an empty Weekly Prep Sheet. (next page)

Step 2: With every subset exercise you place into the program, check it off to make sure you're hitting all Core-4 movements throughout the week.

Step 3: Once finished with your week's prep, audit your weekly prep sheet to see where you could reduce redundancy and add movements you may be lacking.

Ready to Turn This Into a Full System?

You've just seen one tool—but when it's part of a complete framework, the results multiply. I work with both individual coaches and facility owners to build custom systems that:

- Remove guesswork from programming
- Streamline athlete flow and staff communication
- Create measurable buy-in and consistent results
- Scale your coaching or facility without burning out
